In the era of physical distancing, communicating with customers has taken on a whole new importance – and challenge. Customers we previously interacted with in-person have moved online, and now all communication must flow through digital channels. When it comes to digital marketing, it can be difficult to separate out the noise from what actually matters, and focus on impact. There are so many channels, tools, technologies, and emerging approaches that it can be challenging to know where to start and how best to use your time and energy. That's where we cover options and strategies for an online presence that stands-out and is executed based on impact and what actually works for your business.
